Los Angeles Standard Light Rail Vehicle Products and Services Directory

Introduction

At the direction of the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission (LACTC), the Rail Construction Corporation (RCC) has completed a survey of Southern California manufacturers in Phase I of its Light Rail Vehicle Directory Project. The survey identified over 500 firms that are willing and able to provide products and services for virtually every light rail vehicle construction need. Thirty of these companies were randomly selected for in-depth, on-site surveys, and in nearly every case project team members were impressed with the technical and management skills they observed. The directory provides major rail vehicle builders with unique information regarding specific local suppliers or subcontractors they can integrate into their contract proposals.

Project Background

The Light Rail Vehicle Directory Project was initiated in support of public desire that fixed-rail mass transit projects in Southern California should generate business opportunities for local companies to the maximum extent possible. The strong domestic content requirements in our contracts provide substantial incentives for rail car builders to seek qualified U.S. subcontractors and suppliers. It is our belief that the directory can and will serve as an effective tool to showcase the talents, skills and abilities of our local industry, so as to facilitate business relationships of choice between prime rail car manufacturers and local Los Angeles firms.

The Subcontractor Directory and Future Efforts

Developing a subcontractor directory was an essential first step in this process. Rail car manufacturers have stated that they lacked information about local companies in our region that could meet or exceed procurement requirements. In addition many potential contractors were skeptical that Southern California producers possessed the capabilities to provide products or services appropriate for rail car construction.

To address these concerns within the very short time frame created by the rail car proposal process, this products and services directory was produced to immediately provide potential rail car contractors with appropriate information about local firms that can supply specific rail car construction products or services, and be included in the contractors proposals.

The directory is the first of its kind matching Southern California firms with specific, detailed light rail vehicle parts and services procurement needs. It was developed in several steps:

- (i) RCC engineers identified and comprehensively listed in alphabetical order the several hundred products and services necessary to build a rail transit vehicle.
- (ii) A questionnaire to obtain information about potential Southern California suppliers was designed by the RCC and the Economic Roundtable, a local research firm responsible for conducting the supplier surveys and compiling the directory.
- (iii) A target list of over 2000 local manufacturers was developed from a database maintained by the Economic Roundtable, existing commercial directories of regional companies, and other regional databases provided by business groups such as CALSTART and New Vision for Southern California.
- (iv) The Products and Services List, the questionnaire, and a cover letter explaining the subcontractor directory project were mailed or faxed to each of the firms on the target list. Telephone surveys were conducted to clarify responses and obtain additional information. Each firm was asked to provide information about its business and production capabilities, and to match its skills as appropriate with the specific items listed on the Products and Services List. Questionnaire responses were requested to be returned to the Economic Roundtable within a certain time limit.
- (v) Over 500 responses to the questionnaire were received within the survey period. The responses were entered into a computer database, and a list was generated alphabetically matching each respondent to the relevant entries in the Products and Services List, as well as a directory summarizing the background information provided by each firm.
- (vi) To generate additional information about Southern California manufacturers, and to spot-check the questionnaire results, RCC managers and Economic Roundtable staff randomly selected thirty questionnaire respondents for on-site surveys.

The subcontractor directory and the in-depth surveys clearly demonstrate that hundreds of our region's firms have remarkable capabilities that can be applied to rail car construction needs. Indeed, our site surveys confirmed that many of these firms possess innovative technologies and manufacturing capabilities that should be attractive to any major rail car builder. Phase I of the RCC's subcontractor directory project will accomplish its goal of informing potential contract bidders about Southern California's substantial resources directly applicable to light rail vehicle manufacturing. Phase II goals are to continue to identify local suppliers, increase the role of local manufacturers in rail car procurement projects, and to help create a sustainable transportation industry in our region by facilitating long-term links between Southern California companies and world-class light rail vehicle manufacturers.

Through the means discussed herein, the Commission seeks to foster enduring links between Southern California's sophisticated manufacturers and the host of world-class rail car builders, thus generating long-term transportation industry business opportunities for our region.

GUIDE TO USING THIS DIRECTORY

This directory provides a detailed listing of over 500 Los Angeles County firms interested in providing products and services for light rail vehicle manufacturing. These firms were identified through a survey sent to over 2,000 firms in advanced manufacturing and service industries which are potential sources of supply for light rail vehicles. Responses were screened to identify firms with products and services which would be of value to rail car builders.

Index Section

The first section of the directory is an alphabetical listing of products and services provided by firms listed in the directory. Under each heading there is a list of firms that provide that product or service.

Products and Services Section

The second section of the directory is an alphabetical listing of firms. The following categories of information are provided for each firm:

- Name of Firm Firm's legal business name.
- Contact Information Address, Telephone Number, Telefax Number
- Contact Person Individual designated to provide information about the firm's products or services.
- Annual Sales Annual sales volume specified in one of the following ranges: Less than $1 million, $1 to $5 million, $5 to $10 million, $10 to $25 million, $25 to $100 million, Over $100 million.
- Employment The number of employees for both the firm and the specific site.
- SIC The four digit Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) code which reflects the primary activity of each firm, as determined by its principal products or services.
- Business The primary activity of the firm.
- Products and Services Specific products and services that the firm can provide to rail transit car manufacturers.

- Capabilities Exceptional facilities, technologies, or capabilities reported by the firm.
 - DBE Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE) status. To qualify as a DBE, majority ownership in a firm must be held by individuals who are minorities or women. An asterisk (*) denotes that the firm reports it has been certified as a DBE by the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission.
